

Untraceable Void

In this expansive 'Void' of the universe, every matter is formed from numerous expressions of minute particles, and every matter progressively evolves. Everything is considered vacuous in this universe, but everything has been portrayed amidst this everlasting Void. Everyone remains engaged in the search for ways to address this Emptiness. Bereft of any visual clue or realization we are drawn towards a feeling of discontentment or emptiness, and this describes the actual state of mind. Everybody is in pursuit of finding ways to fulfil this emptiness and attain contentment, and this chase itself is the state of fulfilment. We have come here to attain contentment and we have come here with the potential to attain the same. Applying this potential, we are trying to reach a state of contentment by bridging the gap in resentment. In 'Nature,' everything is so well organized, so meticulous, that one's demand can immediately be met with that ultimate sense of satisfaction. The entire mechanism of our body was constructed well before our conscious demand for it, along with food, water, and other things. None of these were results of our needs. According to Nature's law, everything came spontaneously. We are unaware of how our body responds to different senses; however, every organ functions like clock work. In 'Nature,' everything that has to happen is happening accurately, in time and with spontaneity. How does it occur like this? Who drives this meticulously, like a machine? Whatever we see, listen, understand, and feel, who actually experiences them? We can never pin-point that "responder." The "responder" remains unidentified even though we can realize HIS responses amidst everything. However, if the mind desperately seeks, the "responder" responds but whenever we search for the "responder" we will not be able to pinpoint accurately. The presence of the 'responder,' Who remains absent, is the identity of The Great.

Everything becomes imperative at the moment of death: Who leaves this world? What are our next destinations? We need to meditate in order to remain absorbed in that thought of that Supreme. The creations were designed as the greatest response of the Ultimate Mastermind. The response that manifests spontaneously in our minds is the voice of the Supreme, universal tune. We all need to be alert that we are all connected from our heart, through that universal tune to that eternal Void. Our own identity, and the existence of every creation also demonstrates the organic existence of that eternal tune and His divine answers. The eternal Supreme power continuously affirms His presence within us; our mind can register these messages with ease if we are ready to surrender ourselves to that omnipresent, eternal Consciousness. With slight alertness, we can perceive that we are all attached with the same tune to the Supreme Consciousness of this universe. This universal tune is always prevalent through our wordly senses.

Each water flow was connected to the entire water body. The blow of the breeze is connected to the entire ethereal system. This continuous motion is connected in the same manner to everything; this is the universal tune of that supreme consciousness. Everyone is attuned to that Cosmic tune; thus, everyone can apprehend and recognize everything. The whole system of the water body, be it a pool, pond, or ocean, is connected with the same continuous system of motion. Even the motion of pond water at any bounded place always channels itself towards the ocean. We are all established for nurturing this ultimate supreme tune. From the root to the crown center that supreme conscious tune is ever present, perpetual at every molecule, at every particle. All of our sensory organs subsist on their pursuit of mindfulness by preoccupying themselves through the captivating universal tune, with a meditative state of mind. All remained fully absorbed in this ultimate tune of the Supreme. By following the direction of all sensory organs, one can discover the underlying universal tune. Our profound consciousness and dedication towards that cosmic tune will enable us to receive the answers of the Ultimate. The moment we realize the supreme sensitive presence of that tune through our senses, we get to know which place we belong to and the primary purpose of our existence. Everything shall be engulfed within the world of Supreme consciousness. At that moment, we will discover the Creator, our own self, and the essence of every matter.

No one can find His trace when we try to identify Him uniquely, because He is unified with every particle, molecule, or fragment of this universe. Hence, by submerging inward, one needs to thoroughly explore the 'self' with absolute raptness. The ultimate conscious entity of this vast firmament alerts us every moment. Absolute consciousness is always tangible to our reach; we can feel Him, but He is beyond our comprehension. As we are all perceiving, listening, and comprehending everything, this is the fountainhead of that superior universal response. However, no one could pinpoint Him in their search. Everything becomes Void, everything appears empty, which does not comprise any explication, delineation, or demonstration. Furthermore, this universal tune spontaneously and conspicuously exists in our innermost vision, listening ability, and sense of smell. We can feel His omnipresence, but we fail to perceive Him in the material world. This is the ultimate form of that Supreme Being – the greatest universal expression.

Naturally, all the particles of the butter remain scattered in milk, but normally, one cannot observe this with an ordinary vision. One can only consolidate butter particles on the surface of milk by churning it. Likewise, if we continue to excavate the vast cosmological region with our acute consciousness of mind, then the sempiternal response will emerge, the voice of that eminent tune will gloriously rise, and everyplace will be gleaming with that lustrous flow of light. We will then be able to recognize how ravishingly everything has been engraved in that eternal Void.

Every body part, such as bone-marrow, flesh, blood, and fecund are incessantly associated within this everlasting consciousness of this universe. Chanting that absolute conscious hymn in our inner vision, through our deep listening, through our breath, helps us to easily register that supreme tune and remain immersed in that perpetual tune. We can attune our bodily instrument with that ultimate melody; therefore, every particle, every molecule, and every bit of our body gets endowed in His greatest tune and response. With the proper tuning of our bodily instruments, the ultimate intense response of eternal strain will appear in our intellect, and the tune will arise in our heart. Therefore, we need to focus on that incredible tune with foremost priority and remain absorbed with mindfulness on the everlasting Void.

Every universal entity is established and perfectly endowed with the graceful existence of the Supreme, Who is benevolently established in the form of a seed within us. Both the seed and plant constitute the same state of being. We are all the momentary manifestation of the seed, plant, flower, and fruit. We are all obliged to keep our thoughts elevated, focusing on the eternal firmament and proficiently practice the eternal tune in our own contrivance⁴.

⁴ THAKUR's lecture on 07-Jan-1938 and 14-Jan-1968