

Elusive Void

A closer look at creation reveals that everything in creation is mysterious. All the literature, poetry, religious scripts- everything is imaginary, and are made up of fictions and interpretations. In the context of so many exchanges, who speaks, who understands, who listens, who sees, who tastes - the skin, the flesh or the skeleton? None of them can realize or comprehend anything. The eyes itself does not see anything as it just aids in the vision. We need to understand who understands or who comprehends? Hence, the ultimate question remains – who is experiencing all this? There must be someone who definitely understands and continues to realize everything. But HE cannot be found after searching thoroughly. What is the gain if there is no solution to this question? Here every incident is occurring at the superficial level. Their inner identity remains missing. Today the body which is awake, tomorrow that very body will become useless. What departs leaves forever. All the movements, activities, and routines are so transient. The result is a big zero. If one would have detected the actual essence, this result would not have happened. It is possible that aroma may be sourced from garbage, but if we directly apply garbage on our body, fragrance will not emanate. If the secret of the creation is known, then there would not be any problem. What do we call life today, which part is true life? Is it which moves out after death or that which still remains? Is it the one which listens and understands or the one that does not realize? When a fire is extinguished with a blow, where does the fire go? The life that is alive and kicking now is no more in the next moment. Where has it gone? The wick of the lamp doesn't talk about the fire anymore, similarly the body doesn't sense anymore. The body just works like a robot. But when the robot is made by a man, it doesn't respond like us. Who is that responder of this body, does it lie inside or outside of the body? That is still not discovered completely. This fact remains unsolved to everybody. How would we arrive at the solution? Similarly, the actual Creator of this creation cannot be found, and can never be found. If there is a beginning of anything, it initiates the beginning of another. That is the reason that there is no solution. We can realize at every moment the state of not being able to trace Him. The impact of not being able to trace is present in every sense organ. That is why we cannot find who is talking, who is listening, who is moving. This is the state of not being able to find, the state of “not being present”, which is above all states. This is called consciousness or soul. This is helping us to understand everything. This Void or state of Emptiness is represented through the act of creation of life or consciousness and it manifests

Himself within everything and in every element as a “non-existing entity”, thus existing within every entity as “non-discoverable self”. This is the highest mystery of the creation⁹.
